KAUTZ HEARD FROM.

Says He is Not Aggressive Toward the Rebels.

But He is Protecting American Property.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The following cablegram has been received at the Navy Department from Admiral Kautz:

Auckland, April 27, Apia, April 13.—Secretary Navy, Washington:

The receipt of telegrams of March 24 and April 2 is acknowledged. Coal cannot be obtained at Apia, so must be ordered at Auckland. Everything is quiet at Apia. I am not aggressive on Mataafa rebels, but I am protecting United States consulate, United States property and the Samoan government as established by the decision of the chief justice of the supreme court.

The Navy Department, in a foot-note to the above, announces that it has already completed arrangements for supplying coal to Admiral Kautz and it will soon be at his command.

WITH DISCHARGED SOLDIERS.

Transport Comal Rescues Three Men in a Boat.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Transport Comal arrived here this morning from Havana, having on board 150 discharged soldiers from regiments now in Cuba. Among the passengers are J. Carrie Evans, former governor of South Carolina; Estes G. Rathbone, director-general of the postal system of Cuba; Lieutenant Colonel Ellis, Majors J. G. Evans, Thrift and Knapp; Captains H. L. Street, Phister, Cowen, Cole and Rodgers; Lieutenants Griggs, Bookstaver, Mitchell, Blow, Cohn, Kilborne, Wallace, Holbrook and Harderberg; also, Lieutenant Brown, with a guard of 10 men, who are assigned to duty on the steamer.

Captain Evans of the Comal reports that April 24, about 45 miles north of Jupiter light, he sighted a small boat dismasted and flying a signal of distress. Running down to the boat, two men were seen to be making frantic efforts to attract attention. They were taken on board the transport and brought to this port. They were J. K. Bonfield and J. Kehew, of Miami, Fla. They had sailed from Miami in a small sailboat named "Rambler," intending to go to Nassau, but bad weather came on, and the craft was unable to withstand it. The mast was snapped off at the deck, and bedding and other heavy material were thrown overboard to lighten the craft. After three days drifting about, during which all knowledge of their bearings was lost, the Comal hove in sight.

NOT MUCH BUSINESS.

Both Houses of the General Assembly Held Short Sessions.

[Special despatch to the News.]

PROVIDENCE, April 27.—The General Assembly had short sessions today and transacted little business of importance.

In the senate the judiciary committee reported back the act allowing dogs to be taken from one city or town to another in the state without the payment of an additional license. Passed.

Senator Drown introduced a resolution re-appropriating the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the erection of a cottage for hospital purposes at the State Home and School. Referred to the finance committee.

In the house Mr. Sanborn of Newport introduced an act authorizing the city of Newport to issue licenses to peddlers and hawkers at an annual fee of $50. Referred to the committee on judiciary.

From the calendar was taken the substitute act providing for probation officers and the punishment of juvenile offenders. Passed.

The resolution accompanying the petition of the Summer Political Club of Newport, asking that the representatives of Rhode Island in Congress be requested to protest against Southern outrages was also taken from the calendar. The matter was discussed about an hour, and the resolution was defeated by a vote of 17 to 14.

The act repealing the charter of the American Investors' Company, passed by the senate yesterday, was received and referred to the judiciary committee.

An act allowing the Industrial Trust Company to establish branches was taken from the calendar. Mr. Sanborn moved that it be made the special order for Tuesday next; there was some opposition, but this action was finally taken.

Both houses adjourned until Friday.

IN HONOR OF GRANT.

Equestrian Statue Unveiled by His Granddaughter.

Crowds Witness the Ceremony in Fairmount Park.

PHILADELPHIA, April 27.—The final details of the ceremonies incident to the unveiling of the Grant equestrian statue in Fairmount Park this afternoon were completed last night, and this morning everything was in readiness for the moment when Miss Rosemary Sartoris, granddaughter of the dead hero, should loosen the folds of snow-white cloth which hid the statue from public gaze.

Long before noon the tide of travel began to move towards the central point of interest, the broad and picturesque East Park river drive, which the statue overlooks, and several hours before the ceremonies began every point of vantage was taken and the crowds stretched along the river drive into the heart of the city, along the route over which the military marched. In the hands of nearly every person was carried a small American flag and throughout the city homes and places of business flung their "Stars and Stripes" to the breeze.

During the morning cruiser Raleigh rivaled the statue as the objective point of interest. Crowds thronged the docks along the river front or added to the wealth of boatmen and ferry companies in their desire to get a glimpse of the dull leaden sides and shining brasswork of this famous fighter. The cruiser was gaily decorated in honor of the occasion.

The statue of General Grant was unveiled with appropriate ceremonies by Miss Sartoris, granddaughter of the dead hero, in the presence of President McKinley, members of the cabinet and representatives of foreign governments, and a large gathering of distinguished citizens and guests of honor. Prominent among those participating was Mrs. Grant, widow of the general, and other members of the family.

The exercises proper began with the arrival of the Presidential party at 12:30 o'clock. The entrances and the outside of the station were jammed with an immense crowd of persons, which fell back respectfully and formed a lane lane through which the Presidential party under the escort of the reception committee of citizens passed. The First Troop, Philadelphia Cavalry, formed the guard of honor from the station to the Hotel Bellevue. On their arrival there the President and party were entertained at luncheon, after which a brief rest was taken until 2 o'clock.

Promptly at that hour the City Troop re-assembled and escorted the party to the reviewing stand in front of the monument. The President and members of the cabinet occupied the leading carriages. Then came the foreign ministers followed by the ladies and other distinguished guests of the party, headed by Mrs. McKinley and Mrs. Grant, officers of the army and navy, Governor Stone and staff, Adjutant General Theodore S. Peck, representing the state of Vermont; the legislative committee, Mayor Ashbridge, heads of city departments and other guests of honor followed. The carriages drove over the route of the parade and upon arrival at the monument the President was received with the national salute of 21 guns. Simultaneously the guns of the Raleigh in the Delaware river also fired a salute.

The Grant monument, as it now stands, is exactly the same size as the one in Union square, New York. It was designed by Daniel Chester French and Edward C. Potter, both American artists. The former modeled the figure of General Grant and the latter the horse. They have endeavored to depict the hero in the position of a dignified and quietly-imposing "silent man on horseback," and in so doing have departed entirely from the conventional.

There is an absence of the dramatic action shown in the prancing steed and the waving sword. Instead, the general rides his horse, deep in thought. In expression and features, the face is indicative of a strong, though latent and modest, personality. He is clad in field garb, with high cavalry boots, close buttoned coat, and a long cape or coat falls in folds over the horse. The latter stands firmly on his four feet, with head turned slightly to one side. The whole aspect of the statue is one of restrained strength.

The idea was conceived by the Fairmount Park Art Association, and the work is presented by that body to the city to be placed in the park. The height of the statue from the bottom of the plinth to the top of the rider's hat is 15 feet 1 inch. The total weight is five tons. The pedestal is built of Jonesboro granite, and the total cost was $32,575.35.

OFF FOR PHILADELPHIA.

President and His Party Leave for the Celebration.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—President McKinley and party left at 9:40 a.m. today to attend the ceremonies incident to the unveiling of the Grant monument. In the party, besides the President, were Mrs. McKinley, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Gage, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Long, Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock, Attorney General Griggs, Captain Satoris, Dr. Rixey, the President's physician; Mr. George Cortelyou, assistant secretary to the President; Mr. Forster, stenographer, and the necessary servants. Mr. S. S. Saxton, a nephew of the President, joined the party at the last moment, to accompany it to Philadelphia.

The special train over the Pennsylvania railroad, bearing the party, consisted of private car Campania, parlor car Agatha and combination baggage and smoker Atlanta. The train is due at Philadelphia at 12:30. At Wilmington, Del., the President will be received by a committee of citizens of Philadelphia.

GRANT'S VISION REALIZED.

Before His Death He Saw a New Era for the Country.

GALENA, Ill., April 27.—For the seventh time in as many years citizens here today paid tribute to the memory of General U. S. Grant, with exercises in commemoration of the anniversary of his birthday. The celebration was upon a scale which surpassed any similar event under the auspices of the Grant Day Association, thousands of out-of-town visitors witnessing the exercises in honor of the soldier-president. The orator of the day was Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith, who said in conclusion:

"Looking down the vista of time from the serene elevation of his conscious place on the border line of earth and eternity, lifted above all the passions of the hour, with his work done and his fame secure, General Grant saw and said that our country was entering on a new era. Yes, on a new era of unity and progress and power. For, under the impulse and influences of the national patriotic re-awakening of the past year, we witness more than ever on this anniversary of his birth such a reunion of the North and the South in heart and in hand as his great and magnanimous spirit yearned for. And with this uplifting of the national sentiment at home we see on the broader field what his tranquil view prefigured, in the advance of the English-speaking race, and of our own portion of it, to a larger part in the commerce and civilization of the world."

SCHLEY AND WHEELER.

Arrive in Pittsburg to Speak at the Americus Club Banquet.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 27.—Admiral W. S. Schley and General Joseph Wheeler, who are to speak at the Grant banquet of the Americus Club tonight, arrived on a special train from Washington this morning and were greeted at the station by a large crowd. After breakfast the party, which had been augmented by the arrival Colonel A. K. McClure of Philadelphia and General W. J. Rulings of Oil City, visited the armor plate plant at Homestead and the Firth-Stirling projectile company at Demmler. In the afternoon a public reception was held at the Americus clubhouse.

DEMANDED A RETAINER.

Evidence Introduced Against District Attorney Ingham.

PHILADELPHIA, April 27.—Former United States District Attorney Ellery P. Ingham and Harvey K. Newitt were arraigned before Commissioner Edmunds today on a charge of attempting to bribe secret service operative William J. McManus in connection with the Jacobs-Kendig-Taylor-Bredell revenue stamp counterfeiting.

William L. Kendig, the Lancaster tobacco manufacturer, was the first witness. He identified Mr. Ingham and said he first met him January 31. At that time witness said he was making counterfeit stamps of the denomination of fifty cigars. William Jacobs of Lancaster, he said, was also associated with him in this business. Kendig said that on the occasion of his first visit to Mr. Ingham's office he had questioned Mr. Ingham regarding the latter's acquaintance with Secret Service Agents Burns and McManus. Ingham, witness said, demanded a retainer and received $50. Witness said he told Ingham that he believed that the secret service agents were after him.

Providence Jewelry Employe Held for the Grand Jury.

PROVIDENCE, April 27.—In the district court this morning Frederick Seiter pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing gold scrap from the Bassett Jewelry Company, by which he was employed, and was held to await the action of the grand jury. The company has been missing valuable scrap for some time and Seiter was suspected. Late yesterday afternoon he was taken to police headquarters and detained while a search of his room was made. Gold and silver scrap to the value of more than $400 was found there by detectives.

CALUMPIT PARTLY OCCUPIED.

Lawton's United Columns In Pursuit of the Enemy.

WASHINGTON, April 26.--The following cablegram was received at the War Department late this evening:

Manila, April 26. Adjutant General, Washington:

General Lawton is at Norzagaray and Angat. His two columns have united and have driven the enemy to the north and west. Slight casualties are reported, but the names are not given. His only means of communication is by couriers.

General MacArthur has taken the portion of Calumpit south of the river. The movement of his troops is attended with difficulties, on account of the jungle, the heat and the strong intrenchments. His casualties yesterday were three killed and 11 wounded.

Developments thus far are satisfactory.

OTIS.

KAUTZ'S LETTER.

No Disposition to Treat Its Contents Seriously.

WASHINGTON, April 26.--The publication of Admiral Kautz's letter referring to his position at Samoa caused consternation at the Navy and State Departments at first reading; but there was soon exhibited a disposition to minimize the affair, for it was clearly apparent that the letter was nothing more than a strictly private communication passing between members of the same family. Nevertheless, coming as it does close upon Captain Coghlan's indiscretion, and following the publication of Judge Chambers's letter to his brother criticising the Germans in Samoa, the opinion was held that Admiral Kautz's letter could not have other than a harmful effect upon the relations between the United States and Germany.

The letter was brought to the President's attention, and some sort of a reminder may be sent to the officer to be more careful in his correspondence. No orders have been issued to the Philadelphia to leave Samoa as the admiral says, so it is probable that he made the statement on that point in the belief that he could adjust the difficulties between factions in Samoa within the time he indicated.

In official German quarters the letter was not treated very seriously, and there was no indication that the German authorities would take cognizance of it. The spirit of fun in the letter appealed to some of the diplomatic officials, who laughed heartily over Kautz's description of the young king's make-up, and this amusing feature largely offset any irritation which might have been felt over the criticisms contained in the letter.

GERMANY SATISFIED.

Accepts the President's Action in the Coghlan Affair.

WASHINGTON, April 26.--The Coghlan incident was closed, so far as the governments of Germany and the United States are concerned, when the German ambassador called on the President and Secretary Hay, late this afternoon, and expressed the satisfaction of his government with the action taken by the President, announced officially earlier in the day, that Captain Coghlan would be reprimanded and such other "action taken in respect thereto as is proper." The latter phrase was interpreted by the German ambassador as meaning that Captain Coghlan would be detached from the Raleigh after the President's visit to Philadelphia, but while there is no doubt that this will be the case, the Navy Department would add nothing for the public to its official bulletin, apparently because it did not want to mar the festivities of Philadelphia.

Captain Coghlan will receive at Philadelphia tomorrow a letter from Secretary Long, replying to the captain's letter of explanation and regret, in which the Secretary will administer a suitable, but not severe, reprimand, and later Captain Coghlan will receive an order detaching him from command of the Raleigh in the customary form, which will not take effect until after the ceremonies at Philadelphia. Apparently it is the President's intention to heal the smart by carrying out the program of honoring Captain Coghlan and his officers and men by going on board the Raleigh Friday. President McKinley himself made the arrangements for the settlement of this matter so as to satisfy the German government, the German-American element in this country and all other critics of Coghlan, without doing anything more to discipline the captain than could possibly be helped and without spoiling the Philadelphia program and disappointing his hosts at Philadelphia.

It is practically certain that Captain Coghlan will not secure the restoration of the seven lost numbers that he is seeking, but although this may be considered a consequence of his indiscretion, it is probable that without an act of Congress he would not have obtained this favor anyway.

NO MONEY FOR NEW SHIPS.

Congress Failed to Make an Appropriation for the Work.

WASHINGTON, April 26.--Although Congress at its last session authorized the construction of 12 additional vessels, it has just been discovered by the naval officials that it failed to appropriate one dollar to begin the work.

This may prevent the letting of contracts for the six unprotected cruisers, plans for which have been practically agreed upon by the naval board of construction. It may be decided by the Secretary, however, to make contracts with the understanding that the contractors shall be paid when Congress appropriates the necessary amount.

Regarding the armored cruisers and battleships, Congress directed that no contracts for their construction should be let until contracts for the armor of the vessels had been made, and this prohibition has now been reenforced by the discovery that there is no money with which to even pay for preparing the plans for the armored ships.

Rear Admiral Hichborn, chief naval constructor, took sufficient money from the increase of the navy fund to pay for preparing the plans for the unprotected cruisers, but the cost of making plans of the armored cruisers and battleships will be heavy. The department will probably try to have payments made out of the increase of the navy fund, and replace it from future appropriations.

ANTI-REVISIONISTS ALARMED.

Dreyfusites and Anti-Dreyfusites Come to Blows.

PARIS, April 26.--The publication by Figaro of the evidence of Captain Cuignet before the court of cassation has thrown the anti-revision party into a state of consternation. All the anti-Dreyfus papers are boiling with indignation, and several of them suppress altogether the testimony of this officer, whose principal statement was that the guilt of Dreyfus could be only inferentially established from the secret dossier. The Gaulois denounces the Figaro for its "infamous publication," while the Eclair denounces Captain Culguet in unmeasured terms.

Captain Culguet's denunciation of Colonel Du aty de Clam as a forger is held to be a complete giving away of the case of the general staff. The only possible explanation for it seems to be that Cuignet, acting under orders, is making Du Paty de Clam a scapegoat for the staff.

The advocates and opponents of revision held rival meetings here this evening. Fights occurred afterward in the streets, during which many persons were injured.

The Figaro begins today the publication of the evidence offered before the united chambers of the court. Mr. Paleologne, one of the permanent officials of the foreign office, in the course of a long explanation regarding the cipher telegrams, expressed the conviction that the document contained in the secret dossier, purporting to be a telegram from a foreign agent to his government, indicating the relations of Dreyfus with Germany, and which Captain Cuignet had cited as proving guilt, was a forgery.

THE CZAR'S TREATMENT OF THE FINNS.

A correspondent of the London Standard, writing from Vienna, gives a novel and interesting explanation of the czar's treatment of the Finns. He says the truth is that the czar is personally in favor of the Russification of Finland, as well as of Russian Poland, and even of the Khanates in Central Asia, so recently acquired by Russia, and that his motives are part of a far-reaching policy. The general scheme which he desires to promote makes it necessary that, while Russia is engaged in building up a new and vast empire in Asia out of the crumbling fragments of China--an empire which is to surpass that of British India--there should be no possibility of a revolutionary movement at home, or of a flank movement by one of Russia's rivals; by Germany, for instance, or England. The country of Finland would lend itself very well to such a movement, by its geographical position, its accessibility from the sea, and its proximity to the Russian capital. This, he asserts, is the general motive which influences the czar's policy. The special motive, however, is that Russian politicians firmly believe in the approaching and complete separation of Norway from Sweden, and hope to acquire a hold upon the separated kingdom of Norway, whether in the form of an alliance or otherwise, in which case Finland, with an essentially Swedish population, at any rate as regards the ruling classes and with decided sympathies towards Sweden, might be a thorn in Russia's flesh if left under an autonomous administration.

CHARITIES OF THE BARON AND BARONESS HIRSCH.

The Neue Freie Presse of Vienna asserts that the estate left by the Baroness Maurice de Hirsch de Gereuth, who died April 1, has been valued at $125,000,000, of which $100,000,000 will be expended in carrying on the various charities founded or fostered by the baron and baroness. The Hirsch Foundation in New York receives $1,200,000, and the Institute at Montreal one tenth of that sum.

Both the Baron and Baroness Hirsch contributed millions to charity in this country. It was in 1890 that the baron, after consultation with prominent Hebrews in the larger American cities, made known his plan to establish an educational colony at Woodbine, N. J., with a monthly endowment of $10,000. In 1891 he cabled to Jesse Seligman that he could draw a letter for $2,500,000 more for use in the colonizing and educational schemes in this country. This immense sum was known as the Baron Hirsch fund.

In March, 1897, Baroness Hirsch, then a widow, decided to give $1,800,000 to charitable institutions in the United States. Of this $1,000,000 went to the Baron Hirsch fund, while smaller amounts were distributed as the merits of the beneficiaries appealed to her. Oscar S. Straus, formerly minister to Turkey, and one of the trustees of the fund, was selected to distribute the new gift.

The Baron Hirsch Fund School in New York city was the baroness learned, conducted in a rented building. This was considered poor economy, so $150,000 went to the purchase of ground and the erection of a suitable structure. The one hundred thousand dollar mortgage on the building of the Educational Alliance she likewise paid, and she established a two hundred thousand dollar school for working girls in New York.

These gifts by no means represent the extent of her charities in this country, for she always desired that where it was possible her name should not be used.

Among her gifts to charity in Paris was a donation of 2,000,000 francs to the Pasteur Institute.

Meyer Isaacs, president of the fund, recently told some of the work being accomplished. "The fund," he said, "was intended to enable Russian and Roumanian Hebrews coming to this country to support themselves. An agent is at New York to furnish the immigrants with information."

DEPEW'S SEAT IN THE SENATE.

Chauncey Depew will probably feel much at home in the Senate. It has been announced that a seat has already been selected for him and its location has been given, but the important significance of the selection has not been remarked. The greatest delicacy and regard for the fitness of things is always observed in matters pertaining to the arrangements of the Senate. The habits of many dinners cling lovingly about the new Senator from New York. If he had been given a remote seat in the Senate chamber, along the outer edge or grouped with the common assemblage, he would have felt out of place. The seat of honor is always his at table.

There is no seat of honor in the Senate--or all are seats of honor--but long-continued custom has its influence upon the mind, and he was given a seat, therefore, just at the right of the presiding officer, where he is sure to feel at home. This delicacy of consideration was carried even further. He was surrounded by a group of the most gifted and brilliant talkers in the Senate, among whom he will shine forth as a star of most peculiar brilliancy. Assembled about him will be Foraker, Spooner, Beveridge and Kenn, and the little triangular section at the right of the Vice President will be known as the temple of eloquence.

Spooner and Foraker were regarded as the best speakers in the Senate during the last Congress. Beveridge's reputation as an orator is national, and he sailed into the Senate on the wings of eloquence, by a quicker flight than Depew. Kean is an elegant, smooth and poetic talker, who charms by the softness of his speech, elevates by his poetic fancy and thrills by an outburst of eloquence at the close. Though he and Beveridge, as well as Depew, will, on the assembling of Congress, appear for the first time in the Senate, they will not come as strangers. With such environments Depew's tune in the Senate promises to pass as agreeably as an endless round of dinners all at the speech-making period of the repast.--[Washington Star.

AROUND RHODE ISLAND.

The congregation of the First United Presbyterian Church of Central Falls at a meeting last evening voted unanimously to request the Boston presbytery to issue a call to Rev. John P. Pollock of New Kingston, N. Y., to accept the pastorate of the church to succeed Rev. William M. Barr, resigned. Mr. Pollock is a graduate of Washington and Jefferson College of Pennsylvania and of the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Allegheny, Pa., graduating from that place in 1892. For the past five years he has been pastor of the Presbyterian church at New Kingston, N. Y.

More seizures were made in Providence yesterday by the internal revenue officers of cigars stamped with counterfeit stamps, purchased from Jacobs, the Lancaster, Penn., manufacturer, recently arrested by the secret service officials. In all 16,000 cigars have been taken in Providence and there are more in sight.

Henry S. Wood, deputy superintendent of the state almshouse, died last evening at Howard. Mr. Wood had held that office since 1891. He was born in Vassalboro, Me., and came to Providence some 14 years ago. He was engaged in institutional work for over 25 years, and during that time was an officer in the South Boston house of correction, where he was previous to locating in Providence. He was also connected with the Butler hospital at one time, and previous to his call to the almshouse was supervisor in the state insane asylum. He is said to have been one of the most efficient officers of the board of state charities. The deceased was in his forty-sixth year.

A small barn, two horses, a quantity of hay and several harnesses were burned last night in the rear of Gladding's fish market on Thames street, Bristol. The fire was the third one in the building in the last six weeks. The other two are supposed to have been of incendiary origin. Last evening shortly after the blaze was discovered a broken bottle with evidences of kerosene in it was found in the doorway of the barn. This is regarded as being positive proof that the building was set on fire. Charles F. Gladding owned the property that was burned.

WHAT GRATEFUL WOMEN SAY

About Pe-ru-na as a Remedy for Female Catarrh.

MAGRUDER, YORK CO., VA.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.:

"I can scarcely find words to express my gratitude to you for all your kindness to me. We have used Pe-ru-na in our family for the past year and find it a wonderful medicine. It has robbed the grave of one victim, for I was in a critical condition when I wrote you before. Thanks to you, however, my health is fully restored and am better than I have been for five years. I cannot say too much in favor of your medicines. If you can use any words of mine to assist you in your work I will only be too glad. I wish every young lady in our town could read your book. There would be a great deal less sickness and puny women."--Miss Bertha E. Sargent.

NAVASOTA, TEX.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.:

"I think it is time to let you know what your treatment has done for me. I am rid of that terrible trouble I had when I wrote to you. When I would stoop over I could not straighten up without the most severe pain. I am well of that, and am much better in other ways. I am still taking Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin and am giving it to my two little girls. We took it all through the yellow fever scare. Everybody in this town, I think, had the dengue, but if we had it, it was so light that we did not know it; only one of the little girls had a light headache and a little fever. I did not call the doctor, but used your medicine, which I praise highly and recommend."--Mrs. F. K. F. Gille, Box 19.

OSYKA, MISS.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.:

"I am sure that Pe-ru-na is one of the best medicines on the market. I have taken it every winter for the last four years. I first tried it after a long, hard spell of la grippe, for cough and catarrh caused by la grippe. I am sure that I would have been in my grave now had I not used it. I have told many others the good it did me. Everybody said that I had consumption, and I knew that I would have it unless I got relief. Every fall for the last four years I take it as a preventive from cold. I believe that if people knew what a great preventive Pe-ru-na is they would have less trouble from that dreaded disease, la grippe. It never fails. I am well advanced in life, but I feel that I might live through many winters with the help of Pe-ru-na. I never forget to recommend it to young as well as old for all kinds of colds, coughs, catarrh, etc. I feel it my duty to give praise where it is due. I am and ever shall be grateful to the man who discovered Pe-ru-na."--Mrs. S. E. Dicker.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.:

"I am feeling much better now than I have for two years. I have taken ten bottles of your Pe-ru-na and will continue taking it and will recommend it to my friends, as a greater and truer philanthropy than this cannot be imagined. A medical missionary like yourself is what this world needs most, as you are always willing to give free advice to all. I find Pe-ru-na to be the best medicine for female complaint, and in all cases of extreme weakness I think it is the best remedy in the world, as it has done me a great deal of good. My friends say that I am looking better now than I have for years. They want to know what I have been doing, I look so well. I tell them that Pe-ru-na did it. I hope Dr. Hartman will live many years more to help others as he did me."--Mrs. H. Buthe, 1834 Sixth street.

IN BOOK LAND.

THE attraction of "Espirifu Santo" lies not alone in the happy title, but lingers still after the last page is read. The tender little name which is bestowed on the girl baby at her birth is emblematic of the dainty, unworldly charm of the book. The people in it are far from commonplaces; their minds and lives run together in roads not untraveled indeed, but unbeaten into highways.

There are two brothers, both great singers, and as opposite in character as in voice. In early life Theodore, the tenor, is full of fascination, but when he becomes a man he slips through the author's undetermined fingers and grows intangible and elusive, though without the sprightliness of naturally elusive creatures. We cease to feel him as a personality; as our grandfathers would say, and as a very purist in English has recently said, we cannot sense him. Adriano, the older brother, is moulded of like passions with the rest of the world, but has a merrier way of taking them. The atmosphere of the novel is charged with music and religion, which are the two potent forces in shaping events.

The minor characters are admirably drawn—far more true to life than the principals. There is Mme. Deleponle, the singer and singing mistress; Mme. Valarge, wise and witty; Catalina, also with a marvelous voice and method; her father, Senor Disdier, who is well studied; a Monsignor Ianson, and a faithful servant, Oreste. Others too help make the subordinate parts agreeable indeed.

Mrs. Henrietta Dana Skinner is said to be thoroughly qualified to write a musical novel, and this is a very pleasing one. The cynical may object to the extremity of the religious reform as rather an etherealization of good substantial flesh than a mere conversion from soul sickness to soul health, but probably that objection is mere carping. The two rarefied lovers, Theodore and Espiritu, fade away almost together just before their approaching wedding day could arrive.

Wales may be a ragged little bit of the map, but it fills quite a place in current fiction. A. T. Quiller Couch is writing ideally and idyllically of "The Ship of Stars" which sails in the sky at which Cornishmen gaze, and there are others with less work to their credit who yet have found the Cornish outlook on life an enticing subject to master.

Messrs. D. Appleton & Co. have published several books dealing with Welsh lives and types, and now issue "Paul Carah, Cornishman." Paul is a character not naturally heroic, yet of that emotional Celtic type which interests by its mercurial changes. It is rather remarkably done—the picture right at the first of Paul Carah hurrying toward the home he had not seen during years of willing exile, his brain and feet hastening toward new schemes and old friends; the portent of the flock of circling birds and the dramatic treatment of his reception are capitally good work. His departure is almost as well handled. The author, Charles Lee, has made of Paul Carah one of the men who go through the world like a stencil plate, stamping on every memory the name of a masterful man.

"The Procession of Life" in Mr. Horace Vachell's novel tramps over the newmade roads of early statehood. California has had many lovers and haters, as mistresses so fair and so inflexible ever have. The procession of life which moves through these pages can scarcely be called sad or bitter or cynical or despairing, since there is love marching unfailingly with the rest, and pluck and honest labor. Yet we perforce are sensible of the same attitude which Hilda Strafford felt, looking out on the failure wrought by the merciless sunshine—a failure impossible for work or zeal or plan of men to avert, and so hated with the hatred which is in part terror of the stronger. The story is excellently told, and interesting in itself apart from its events of national importance.

The cult of Christian Science brought into unhappy notoriety by the eminence of one of its latest victims, Harold Frederic, is mercilessly scored and entirely unconsciously gives rise to variously witty comments. Needless to say the comment is not from its devotees, whose possession of a grain of humor would undoubtedly sever their allegiance. Mr. Vachell makes one of his characters define the sect: "A Christian Scientist was one whom neither Christians nor scientists would have any dealings with." Admirably put, if scathing.

CIVIL ORDER, NOT EMPIRE.

The want of substance and worth in the Filipino character is revealed as clearly in the stupid inertness of the majority who have not joined Aguinaldo as in the fatal folly of those who have. We have been repeatedly assured, and there can be no doubt of the fact, that Aguinaldo controls only a small fraction of the inhabitants of Luzon. The peace and comfort of the non-combatant Filipinos, must, of course, be gravely menaced by the war that is going on around Manila, but although the fighting began two months ago, we now hear for the first time of any attempt on the part of the peaceful natives to bring Aguinaldo to his senses.

A number of prominent and wealthy Filipinos, the despatches say, are forming a committee to try to bring about an understanding between Aguinaldo and the Americans. Their plan is to get from the Schurman commission a statement of the terms that will be offered if Aguinaldo will surrender, and then to urge the rebel chief to accept them. But the difficulty is to find a native bold enough to bell the cat. The despatch would have been inconsistent with most that we have heard of the Filipino character if it had not added that it was doubtful whether any of the committee would dare call upon Aguinaldo in person, as some of them had been sentenced to death by him for petitioning him to quit fighting.

As we have little or nothing to hope from the good sense of the natives, it must be plain to everybody, even to those who are distressed, as all humane Americans are, at the necessity of having to pay the price of death and war for the maintenance of order, that the shortest and most merciful way to peace is the complete suppression of all armed resistance to lawful authority. Professor Giddings of Columbia put the case soberly and surely in a way to command the approval of right-thinking men when he said recently in an address before the Church Union:

"The first question to be answered is whether we are justified in continuing our present particular policy in the Philippine islands. Shall we attempt by force to subdue the natives of those islands, or shall we, as some have proposed, begin to bargain-bribe Aguinaldo and his followers to get them to establish some sort of peace, or shall we give them practical autonomy by putting the insurgent natives in charge of the government? I am afraid my answer may shock you, but I believe it to be our moral duty—not merely our political expediency—to push the campaign against the Filipinos till they absolutely surrender to our arms."

Our British friends do not need to remind us that in the task of making these Orientals obey civil authority we shall need many troops and must not be disheartened if the struggle be prolonged far beyond our early expectations; nor if we meet with occasional reverses, like the deplorable affair at Baler on the twelfth, when Lieutenant Gilmore was captured in attempting to rescue some Spanish prisoners. We know the hard and painful nature of the work before us—if in no other way, from our study of the history of peace-making wars waged by our English kin against intractable natives in India. We know our duty, we know our strength. We shall use the one, with mercy, but also with resolution, until the other is completely performed.

Any criticism or comment upon our undertaking that does not reckon on our capacity and our intent to make the civil power obeyed in Luzon as it is obeyed in Massachusetts, in Ohio, or in the Indian Territory, is quite worthless.

We must advise our friends, the London newspapers, that when they call our work in the Philippines "empire making" they use a term which nobody whose opinions are representative of American sentiment will accept. In the early days, under the spell of a novel opportunity suddenly presented to a people unused to visions of empire, we may have dreamed our dream. But we are far too sensible and matter-of-fact a people to linger under the spell of a foolish illusion. We have been a year in the Philippines, and frankly, the more we see of the place the less we like it. The better we become acquainted with the natives the more deeply we sympathize with their almost childish unfitness to care for themselves, and the less we desire their society in any relation save that which duty for a time imperatively imposes. Our highest aspiration, our full hope of empire in the Philippine islands will be realized on that fortunate day, though it may be distant, when our last ship of war with our last soldier on board her, as she sails out of Manila bay, fires a salute to the flag of the Filipino republic, floating over the headquarters of a capable and responsible native government established and maintained by the consent of the governed.—[New York Times.

Rub the outside well with salt, put the stuffing in lightly, sew the opening together and lay the fish on the dripping pan with the back upright. Fasten the head and tail together or turn them in opposite directions and fasten with skewers and strings. Gash the flesh on each side about two inches apart and put narrow strips of fat salt pork in the gashes. Rub with soft butter, dredge with salt, pepper and flour. Slip a fish sheet under for convenience in lifting. Put several strips of pork under the fish, but add no water. Put into a hot oven and bake until the flesh separates from the bone and is well browned. Baste often after the pork melts. Remove strings and skewers, slip it off on a hot platter and garnish with parsley laid over the head and Saratoga potatoes on either side. Serve with Dutch sauce.

WATER PIPES DESTROYED BY CARBONIC ACID.

Some interesting instances of the rapid destruction of iron pipes by carbonic acid in water passing through have been noted by German engineers. Near Benthen, Silesia, a mile and a quarter of cast-iron pipe of average quality connected a pumping station with a reservoir, and this pipe began to leak at the end of two years, when the upper third was found to be deeply pitted and punctured, the rest being unaffected. At Johann-on-the-Saar, which receives very soft and pure water from the carboniferous deposits of the Saarbruck district, the action on the iron was made known in a different way. The water in a short time became badly discolored and unfit for use, and investigation showed that the supply at the source was saturated with carbonic acid, either free or as bicarbonate.

THE MAN BEHIND THE PLOW.

There's been a lot to say about the man
behind the gun,
And folks has praised him highly for the noble work he done;
He won a lot of honor for the land where men are free,
It was him that sent the Spaniards kitin'
back across the sea;
But he's had his day of glory, had his little spree, and now
There's another to be mentioned—he's
the man behind the plow.

A battleship's a wonder and an army's mighty grand,
And warrin's a perfession only heroes
understand;
There's somethin' sort o' thrillin' in a thug that's wavin' high,
And it makes you want to holler when the boys go marchin' by;
But when the shootin's over and the fightin's done, somehow,
We find we're still dependin' on the man behind the plow.

They sing about the glories of the man
behind the gun,
And the books are full of stories of the
wonders he has done;
The world has been made over by the fearless ones who fight;
Lands that used to be in darkness they have opened to the light;
When God's children smart the soldier
has to settle up the row,
And folks haven't time for thinkin' of
the man behind the plow.

In all the pomp and splendor of an army
on parade,
And all through the awful darkness that the smoke of battle's made;
In the halls where jewels glitter and where shoutin' men debate,
In the palaces where rulers deal out honors to the great.
There is not a single person who'd be doin' bizness now
Or have medals if it wasn't for the man
behind the plow.

We're a-buildin' mighty cities and we're gainin' lofty heights;
We're a-winnin' lots of glory and we're settin' things to rights;
We're a-showin' all creation how the world's affairs should run, Future men'll gaze with wonder at the things that we have done,
And they'll overlook the feller, just the same as we do now,
Who's the whole concern's foundation—
that's the man behind the plow.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT IN MEDICINE.

Electric light baths, or systematic exposures of the body to the rays of arc lamps, seem to have become an established therapeutic agent in Germany. Their principle is that of ordinary sun baths, but advantages are claimed in the facts that the electric light is at all times available, that it can be regulated according to the strength of the patient and to the disease, that the action upon the heart is very slight, and that harmful bacteria in the body are rapidly destroyed. The baths are administered in a mirror-lined box, in which the disrobed patient is seated with his head projecting outside through a hole in the lid. The sensation experienced is an agreeable and gradually increasing heat, inducing the profuse sweating of the Turkish bath; and complete cure or material benefit is reported in rheumatism, gout, Bright's disease, asthma, chronic catarrhs, skin diseases, and nervousness.

DR. VAN DYKE'S NEW CREED.

Merely a Suggestion for All Evangelical Churches.

Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, who had been quoted as having spoken in his Sunday morning sermon on "The Progress of the Church" for a new statement of faith for the Presbyterian Church, said yesterday that he had been misunderstood when it was stated that he was advocating a change from the Westminster Confession. Dr. Van Dyke said that the ten points advanced in his sermon were merely a statement that would be satisfactory to him if the evangelical churches would write a new creed. He was speaking more broadly than for the Presbyterian church alone—speaking for the evangelical churches of today. His sermon was meant to illustrate the general progress of Christian thought and to show that the general statement of faith of the evangelical churches, if correctly written, would contain advances on the old Confessions. "The time," said he, "is not ripe for proposing a new creed, if you call it that, in the Presbyterian Church. I was one among a number of ministers who discussed that subject about six or seven years ago and the church did not seem to be ready for the change. I do not wish to be understood as advocating it now.

"What I said in my sermon, as I remember it, was that if we had a new creed I should hope it would be shorter and richer than the old one, and if it had ten points in it I should like to see these ten points in it." Dr. Van Dyke dictated the ten points from a letter which he had written to an inquiring friend, as follows:

1—The fullness of the Fatherhood of God, in whose image and likeness every human soul is made.

2—The eternal sonship of Christ, who is the brightness of the Father's glory embodied in a veritable human life.

3—The all-sufficiency of Christ's atonement to take away the sin of the world and reconcile us to God.

4—The living presence of the Holy Ghost as the source of all truth and goodness in every soul that asks for Him.

5—The sovereignty of God dwelling in His world and working out His will here and now.

6—The liberty of every human soul to decide whether it will work against God and perish or with Him and live forever.

7—The supreme authority of the Holy Scriptures as the record of God's progressive revelation.

8—The power of faith in Christ to join the soul to God, who delivers it from sin and makes it holy.

9—The absolute necessity of love and good works as the proof of faith whereby every believer becomes a witness for Christ to all men.

10—The immortal life of love made perfect—which is heaven.

Dr. Van Dyke pointed out in some of the "points" the advance upon the statement in the Westminster Confession. Of the sixth point he said that, while the Westminster Confession confines the opportunity for salvation to "the elect," the new statement broadens it to take in all who decide to be saved.

"Isn't this practically an abandonment of Calvinism?" was asked of Dr. Van Dyke.

"Well, perhaps it is," he replied, "but in another light it is simply a broadening of the old belief. We still hold fast to the belief in the salvation of 'the elect,' but we widen the inclosure to take in all who will be saved."

The first point, he said, was an advance on the Westminster standards in that it makes all men children of God instead of confining His fatherhood to "the elect." The ninth point he considered also an advance on the Westminster Confession, and the embodiment of the active, aggressive missionary spirit of the Christian world of today, which was a new thing at the beginning of the century.

THURSDAY, APRIL 27, 1899.

RICHARD J. OGLESBY.

Richard J. Oglesby, who has just died, was in former years much better known to the general public than he has been to the present generation. He was one of the original free soilers, and helped found that party and never wavered from his first love. He was contemporary with Lincoln, having been an unsuccessful candidate for Congress in 1858, the year in which Lincoln was defeated for the Senatorship by Douglas.

Oglesby went to the war, rose from colonel to major general, became a corps commander, and on his retirement from the army was elected governor of Illinois. He was elected governor for the second time in 1872, and shortly afterward United States Senator, serving but one term. He was elected governor for the third time in 1884.

Since his last retirement from the executive chair he has devoted his attention chiefly to his farm at Elkhart. He was at the national Republican convention in 1892 working as vigorously for the renomination of President Harrison as the youngest and most enthusiastic of the latter's supporters. His record in public life was without reproach, and rough diamond as he was, there were sterling qualities in Oglesby that the public men of later times will do well to cultivate.

The Chicago Record says of him that, like Yates, the great war governor of the state, and like Beveridge and Palmer, he had himself borne arms in the service of the Union and had done in the field under Grant the work that Lincoln was designing at Washington. His war record was conspicuously brilliant and he left the field, wounded and unfit for further service, with the rank of major general. His eligibility for the post of governor was instantly recognized. It was his deserved distinction to be elected governor three times, in 1864, again in 1872 and again in 1884, although he resigned at the beginning of his second term in order to accept a seat in the United States Senate.

Governor Oglesby's record was one in which his state may justly take pride. He was a man of sterling integrity, solid judgment and considerable acuteness of perception. He was an earnest follower of the party, but kept his own independent judgment upon pending issues. The sum of his service on behalf of the public includes not only his gallant and able support of the Union at the most trying crisis in its history, but a long and faithful attention to the conduct of the legislative and political affairs of Illinois.

THE CLAIMS OF LOYALTY.

A few days ago a speaker in a public meeting in New York prayed God to bring overwhelming defeat upon our troops in the Philippines. Whether there be any connection between the single tax and this singular treason we do not know, but we would suggest to the respectable single taxers that they be careful about the company they keep. At a recent public meeting in Boston it is reported that there were cheers for Aguinaldo and hisses for President McKinley. We undertake no discussion of taste with the Bostonians, but we desire to know if they have no sense of decency, no respect for their own country, no loyalty to their own government? Opposition to the policy of the government will justify a good deal, but in a country of popular government the minority is not justified in resorting to such conduct as this. If the people who have to call themselves anti-imperialists have not lost all their reason, as they seem to have lost all sense of nationality, they will take some pains to avoid such exhibitions of themselves.

Every discontented soldier, every soldier who has been rudely awakened to the fact that war is not a dress parade, every soldier who knows more than his officers, and every soldier who is subjected to discipline, can write a complaining letter, largely devoted to explaining to the government of the United States what it ought to do, and get it published in a New York paper with admiring comments upon his great mind and his lofty morality. And yet the very paper that is sedulously trying to show how mutinous our troops in the Philippines are publishes a letter from its own specials and exclusive correspondent, in which the latter says:

"The troops show the greatest eagerness to make every shot count, and expose themselves recklessly to accomplish it. They show a zest in fighting that makes it difficult to restrain them. * * * This eagerness to fight is displayed by the volunteers more than the regulars, for the reason that the volunteers enlisted simply because they wanted to fight, and the regulars did not have this as their chief motive."

Evidently most of our soldiers are performing their military duties with enthusiasm and not spending most of their time in writing political essays for publication in "anti-imperialistic" circles. We have not, however, observed in the organs of disloyalty and mutiny this extract, which appears to be valuable and is supported by a good deal of corroborative testimony, from a letter of Colonel Funston of the Twentieth Kansas regiment: "I am afraid that some people at home will lie awake nights worrying about the ethics of this war, thinking that our enemy is fighting for the right of self-government. The word independent, which these people roll over their tongues so glibly, is to them a word, and not much more. It means with them simply a license to raise——, and if they get control they would raise a fine crop of it. They are, as a rule, an illiterate, semi-savage people, who are waging war, not against tyranny, but against Anglo-Saxon order and decency."

Not only are all the complaints of dissatisfied and insubordinate soldiers reprinted here with admiring editorial comments, but everything discreditable to American soldiers on the field or in camp is culled from the exchanges and raked out of the Manila and Hong Kong gossip without regard to foundation or probability. The latest charge is bloodthirstiness, and the specification is that prisoners have been shot. This may be so. It has never been possible to carry on war according to civilized rules if one party was a savage. The Filipinos have no respect for a flag of truce from our side, and use it themselves only for purposes of deceit. It appears that, as at Omdurman, the wounded have fired into the backs of the victors after the latter had passed over the field. It is impossible to observe the rules of civilized warfare if the enemy disregards them, and a year ago we had the authority of an "anti-imperialistic" paper for the statement that while war between two civilized nations was never justified, war between a civilized and a savage people was almost always justified by the interests of civilization. But some memories are short.

A POLITICAL TRUST.

It looks as though, through a combination of the bosses, Senator Quay's appointment to succeed himself may possibly be recognized as valid. Time and again the Senate has refused to seat appointees under precisely the same circumstances, and Quay himself has voted against several propositions of this kind; but circumstances alter cases. The indications are that a "trust" has been formed among the managers of the Republican party, in several states, for the accomplishment of a common purpose. The governor of California, emboldened by the prospects of Quay's success, has made a like appointment of candidate Burns, who was refused an election by the state legislature, and it is understood that the chief executive of Utah will follow his example, as also in Delaware. Having thus pooled their issues it is not impossible that success will crown their efforts. It is reported that Senators Hanna and Quay have bargained to help each other in their political aspirations, and though the details are not all given of the contract, it is known that each man is to receive his full price.

Captain Coghlan has confessed his mistake, is to receive a reprimand, and thus satisfaction will be rendered to the German representative at Washington. The captain is a brave man, a good sailor and a bold commander, but this is not the first time in which he has failed in speech to meet the requirements of the situation. He has gone with the Raleigh to Philadelphia, to be present at the celebration now in progress in that city, and will find himself one of the best advertised men there. What will follow is yet a matter of uncertainty, but it is believed in well informed circles that he will be detached from his ship as a result of his want of circumspection.

It is now proposed to send colored troops to Manila to do service during the war. If the colored men desire to go to that distant land they should be permitted to enlist freely, and even encouraged to join the army of the United States. There are four negro regiments in this country that can be sent on that duty, and these may be followed by five additional regiments of volunteers to be made up of colored men. It is said that about one third of the Filipinos are negroes of the same race as those of the United States. They are the aborigines of the islands, who were subdued by the Malays who are making the present trouble.

The report of the national treasury shows that there is about twice as much money in circulation now as there was 20 years ago, and same people are wondering why this should be. It should be kept in mind that the country has grown within the last score of years immensely and more currency is required for the transaction of business. In the second place, money is not worth so much in the hands of the people, now that it brings but three or four per cent interest, in contrast with the old times when it brought 7 3-10. On the whole, therefore, the country is probably no better supplied with currency now than it was then.

It is said that no less than 40 or 50 aspirants have arisen in the contest to be fought for Speaker Reed's place. Of course each of these men feels that he is as big or a bigger man than the retiring officer, but the public has not yet made the discovery of a single gentleman who answers to the description. Of course the Speaker's chair can be filled acceptably whenever the man from Maine retires, but not fully.

There is an agitation in Nicaragua in behalf of annexation to the United States. This is a pretty time to ask our Uncle Sam to take on any more foreign possessions, or to indulge a wish for any further revolutions such as exist as a matter of course in the Central American republics.

Schlatter, the "divine healer," is willing to be buried 40 days as a test of the sincerity of his profession, and proof that he has power to raise himself again. This might be a good way of getting rid of the crazy imposter, and the experiment might be permitted for that reason.

General Eagan was given a private hearing by the Miles court of inquiry. The court was probably afraid to allow him to open his mouth in public, lest he should put his foot in it.

In a few days it will be Sunday—Will it be wide open, as last Sunday, or closed? What say the authorities?

Richard Croker has sailed for Liverpool. Joy go with him.

ELIZABETH BLACKWELL.

Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell, who in 1849 received the first medical degree conferred upon a woman in the United States, is spending the evening of her days as a consulting physician at Hastings, England. Although her name is principally associated with women's medical movements in this country, she is an English woman, a native of Bristol. Miss Blackwell came with her parents to the United States when she was ten years old, and while still a girl in her teens became, owing to the death of her father, the mainstay of her family. While engaged in teaching, she conceived the idea of becoming a doctor. Medical women were then unknown in America, and she met with a refusal when she applied for admission to the medical schools. At last by persistent knocking they were opened, and she matriculated in New York. Dr. Blackwell afterward studied in the hospitals of Paris and London, then returned to New York and started as a physician to women and children. After a practice of 20 years she returned to her native land. She is the author of several works dealing with the physical and moral education of girls and with medicine.

POLITICAL JOBBERY IN SPAIN.

When a ministry becomes weak through the desertion of its members, each of whom carries with him his personal following in the house, it must resign or bring in fresh blood. Its leader then goes down among the "independent" groups as into an open market; and the vendors are all agog praising their wares. His price is the adoption—for decency's sake—of some items of a program, and a certain number of comfortable berths for those who have long languished in opposition. It is the buyer's place to decide how much he can afford without undue interference with the claims and interests of those who have hitherto supported him. When he has enough, he will take no more at any price; it would be mere waste of good patronage. The vendors shut up shop until another cabinet crisis gives a market value to what they have for sale. If no bargain is struck, the ministry falls.

The means by which the return of government candidates is secured at elections are various. In desperate cases they are sometimes violent. An instance is quoted in which it was found necessary to bring about the fall of the floor of the room in which the election was held, in order that, during the confusion and flight of the opposition overseers, the voting-urns might be changed for others held in readiness. Many are the miracles of electioneering times. The dead vote with the living; the absent, with those who are present, and always on the right side—they are Ministerialists to a man. Those whose opinions are known to be safe need trouble little about qualifications; even beggars may at times exercise privileges which harsh laws have denied to them; but known opponents and doubtful persons are subjected to rigid scrutiny. The first precaution taken is to secure a trusty body of overseers, whose duty it is to watch over the purity of the elections. On them the election depends, so no efforts are spared to ensure their right thinking; and, if the result is as required, they need fear no inquiry into their methods.

The means by which pressure is brought to bear is the system known as "caciquismo." A "cacique" was an Indian chief, who, under Spanish rule, became the native headman of his village, the spy and tool of the Government, and the agent through whom the odious repartimientos and other forms of oppression were carried out. So now, the village cacique is the agent of a party, backed by all the forces of the executive, and rewarded according to the extent of his unavowable services. His position gives him the command of a certain number of votes. But beyond this he has many means of influencing his neighbors. First, there is the direct patronage of the Government,—the numberless small offices, with facilities for peculation, by which local administration is cumbered. For these it is useless to apply without the good word of the cacique. Then there is the administration of justice, civil and criminal. * * * Criminal justice is not corrupt; but it is undermined by pardons. Juan Palomares, the son of the cacique's neighbor, let us say, has stabbed his adversary in a quarrel and has been sentenced to a long term of imprisonment. The father, a man of some influence, appeals to Don Fulano de Tal, the cacique. A year or so passes, and the hubbub in the village has somewhat subsided, when young Juan Palomares is found going about his usual business. The cacique has whispered a word to the deputy, whose vote is useful to the ministry; the humble petition of Juan Palomares, now lying in chains, has been placed upon the cushion on which the Queen kneels at a great festival; and the trick is played.—H. Butler Clarke, in the Forum.

SOME OF THE THINGS GENERAL WOOD HAS HAD TO DO.

As an example of some of the sanitary problems which have constantly confronted us in this province, I would cite the condition of the district of Holguin after the evacuation by the Spaniards in November. Three thousand cases of the most horrible type of small pox were left scattered through the city and the villages immediately adjacent. Thousands had died, and the streets were filled with filth, dead animals and wrecked furniture. Refuse of all sorts had been thrown into the wells, and, in fact, the condition which confronted us in Holguin was one of the greatest difficulty, requiring immediate and most vigorous action.

The district was put under the command of Colonel Duncan N. Hood, with instructions to establish a rigid military quarantine and to immediately isolate all cases, establishing the necessary hospitals to render such isolation possible. He had the assistance of a large corps of doctors and entire discretion as to the methods of procedure. His work has been wonderfully successful, and with the intelligent and energetic co-operation of Dr. Woodson of the army, assisted by many Cuban physicians, he was able to check the epidemic in less than a month. In two months the number of cases had been reduced to less than 1,200. All of the patients were in carefully isolated camps under medical supervision. The entire city of Holguin had to be cleaned and scraped from end to end. Thousands upon thousands of loads of infectious material had to be removed, house after house disinfected, and, in fact, the volume of work was simply enormous; but it was accomplished quickly and effectively, and today the people are once more going back to their homes and business is resuming its normal condition. This is only an instance of what has been done and of what must be done in other provinces, if we are to make Cuba what it may be made, a comparatively healthy and attractive country to live in.—[General Leonard Wood, in Scribner's.

NEW MUSIC.

Messrs. J. Fischer & Bro., Bible House, New York, are known as publishers of organ music. They are just issuing a new volume of transcriptions for the pipe organ, by Reginald Barrett, which will prove a boon to many an organist who has grown blase with seeing always the same subjects in different forms in their organ collections, or who has no use for the material sent out for the noble instrument by some houses. The themes selected for organ arrangement by Mr. Barrett are of high order and many of them have not been seen before, transcribed for the organ. The list of composers includes such names as Handel, Schubert, Spohr, Bizet, Sir Arthur Sullivan, Delibes, Sternbilde Bennett and B. Godard. The registration is good, and the print large and clear. The book is bound in flexible covers, and is of the regulation organ size.

From C. W. Thompson & Co. is received Silhouette No. 6 in the series of little teaching pieces by George Lowell Tracy, entitled "The Storm;" a very good two-step, "Harvard Volunteers March," by Grace Weston Lunt, and a motet for tenor, alto and bass by L. S. Thompson.

Messrs. Thompson & Co. are known as publishers of musical songs, and three recent issues sustain their reputation. "Gray Rocks and a Grayer Sea," by Kate Vannah, and "A Dream," by H. Chrétien, are pretty, and "A Little Song for Two," by A. Chase Carrington, is desirable for encores.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

Precipitation has occurred within the past 24 hours throughout the upper valleys of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers and the Northwest, also in scattered localities in the eastern states. The weather this morning is generally fair but unsettled in the West and Northwest. This condition is due to an extensive area of low pressure overspreading nearly the entire western half of the country with a minimum pressure of 28.82 inches at Prince Albert, Northwest Territory. The pressure conditions on the New England coast favor a continuation of easterly winds. A warm wave developed in the West yesterday and portions of the Central states have temperatures early this morning of mild degrees.

THE SAN JOSE SCALE.

Horticultural Society Seeking a State Law for Protection.

The Newport Horticultural Society held a well attended meeting last evening.

A petition was presented for consideration, and after a general discussion it was voted to endorse it and have the members sign it as citizens. It asks the board of aldermen to open a road along the west side of Morton Park, from Morton to Bateman avenues, and through the old polo ground. This is in accord with the repeated suggestions of the park commission, and is designed for the protection of the view of Morton Park. The plan for cutting up the old polo ground would turn the back yards of the houses built next the park against Dead Head hill. If a street such as is asked for were built, the fronts of the houses on the polo land would face the park and the beauty of the scene would not be so seriously disturbed.

The matter of the San Jose scale and its effect on horticultural matters in Newport was brought up. The members said that in a number of states there is a state entomologist and an arrangement for certifying that horticultural products shipped from those states are free from dangerous insects. No such arrangement is possible at present in Rhode Island, and goods cannot in consequence be shipped from here to some other states. It was decided to communicate with other Rhode Island societies, with the view of calling the attention of the General Assembly to the need of a law on this subject and the appointment of a state entomologist.

A petition to the General Assembly, asking that the Newport Horticultural Society be treated in the same manner as other societies and be given a sum to assist it financially in its horticultural shows, was also presented, and was generally signed.

After the meeting a social session was enjoyed. Mr. Dunbar played the piano and the members furnished other entertainment by singing, recitations, etc.

A NEW RABBI FOR THE TOURO SYNAGOGUE.

The Congregation Jeshuat Israel has elected Rev. Moses Guedalia of New York rabbi of the Touro Synagogue, to succeed the late Rev. David Baruch. Rev. Mr. Guedalia is a native of Gibraltar and is about 50 years old, with an adult family. He has been recommended to the local congregation by the most prominent ministers of the Spanish and Portuguese Jewish congregations in this country, is highly educated and a Hebrew scholar of much repute. He has for several years officiated as rabbi of the Sir Moses Montefiore Congregation in New York city. It is expected that Mr. Guedalia will begin his duties with the local congregation in a short time.

SEVENTH ARTILLERY HEADQUARTERS ORDERED HERE.

Orders have been issued from the War Department for the transfer of the headquarters of the Seventh United States artillery and band, the latter one of the best in the country connected with the regular army, from Fort Slocum in New York harbor to Fort Adams, and it is expected that the change will be made in a short time. The batteries at Fort Slocum are B, I, L and N, and the commanding officer of the regiment is Colonel Henry C. Hasbrouck, formerly of the Fourth artillery and stationed at Fort Adams. Batteries A and H of the Seventh artillery are located here, H at Fort Adams and A at Fort Greble, Dutch Island.

APPLICATIONS FOR LIQUOR LICENSES.

The license commissioners met last evening to consider applications. They had previously made a tour of inspection, and found that some places needed alterations to comply with the law. A list of these was given the chief of police, who will notify the owners to have the changes made this week. The bonds filed with the applications were examined and much of the preliminary work was done, but no licenses were granted. Another meeting will be held Saturday evening when action will be taken.

JAMESTOWN.

Word was received here today of the death of Major Thomas Lord in New York yesterday morning. Major Lord was one of the pioneer summer residents of this town, having been coming here nearly 20 years. At first he occupied rooms at the Bay View House, then kept by Captain Gardner, later going to the Prospect House, which was then run by Mr. C. E. Weeden, and later, when the latter took charge of The Thorndike had rooms there. At one time he occupied Mrs. Cottrell's cottage on Lincoln street, but later built a cottage on Green lane, where for several years he has spent the summer. He was an officer in the New York Militia and served throughout the civil war. He leaves a wife, but no children.

Mildred Anthony, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George D. Anthony, suffered a painful accident last evening. While playing on the back steps of her home she slipped, and falling broke her left arm. The Beaver Tail made a special trip to take her to Newport, where a physician set the bone and she was returned to her home.

Mr. Joseph Wharton of Philadelphia is in town today for the purpose of completing the deal by which he becomes owner of the Beaver Tail farm. The farm is owned by Elisha W and Amos Cross of Wakefield, and comprises about 250 acres of land, with an unobstructed view of the water. The farm is taxed for $25,000.

Yesterday Crowley began work on the new wharf for the Jamestown Land Company, which runs out 300 feet in front of Shoreby hill. The wharf is to be seven feet wide and will have a diamond head 25 feet square. The work of driving the piles is about completed.

Stillman Saunders began work today on the wharf for T. B. Stork, which is to be 380 feet in length. Captain Roderick McDonald will soon begin work on the new wharf for J. P. Greene, to take the place of the one destroyed in the blizzard. This wharf will be 175 feet long.

FUNERAL OF DANIEL H. T. BARNUM.

Funeral services for the late Daniel H. T. Barnum were held in the chapel of the United Congregational Church this afternoon, and were attended by a large number of friends, including members of Charles E. Lawton Post, Grand Army of the Republic, with whom the deceased had marched many times at the funerals of their comrades. Simple services were conducted by Rev. T. C. McClelland, pastor of the church, who spoke appreciatively of the character of the deceased and his devotion to the church with which he had been so many years connected. The congregation joined in singing two hymns which Dad been "Dan's" favorites in life. The casket was taken from its resting place in the chapel to the hearse by the deacons of the church, who had cared for him many years.

All the Newport volunteers in the United States army and navy have been invited and will be cordially received, and a number of prominent naval officers who participated in the war with Spain have also been invited and are expected to be present and say something. CHINESE COURT HISTORIANS.

There are court historians in China, as there are in other countries: but there is one striking difference, and it lies in the fact that the work of the Chinese court historians does not see the light until the reigning dynasty comes to an end.

In this way these Celestial historians have an opportunity to describe most truthfully the virtues and vices of the various rulers and the real significance of the events which take place during their regime. They can write what they please without fear of censure, for they know that their work will not be published so long as the reigning dynasty lasts.

This has been the rule for more than 2,000 years, the first court historians having been appointed by the imperial house of Han, which reigned from 206 B. C. until 25 A. D.

The duty of these court historians is to write a plain account of all the events that occur during their tenure of office. At regular intervals their completed work is taken from them and is locked up in an iron safe or vault. There it remains until the first member of a new dynasty ascends the throne.

It is then given with all the other histories in the vault to the court historian who is then living, and from the mass of documents he is expected to prepare a truthful history of the dynasty which has just expired. The present dynasty has been reigning since 1644, and consequently no court history has been published since that date.

SOME LIVES MAY HAVE BEEN LOST.

Disaster in the Path of a Storm Which Swept a Nebraska County.

OMAHA, Neb., April 27.—A special to the Bee from St. Edward, Boone county, Nebraska, says a terrific wind storm approaching the fury of a hurricane swept over that place last night, doing a great deal of damage to property and injuring several persons. Hail covered the ground to the depth of two inches and considerable live stock was killed. At the farm of W. A. McCulchin, Mrs. Sprague of Sioux City was struck by flying debris and seriously hurt. Mr. McCulchin was also seriously injured, as was Mr. McCulchin's mother. The house was wrecked.

The storm passed to the northwest, tearing down barns and fences and destroying the slaughter house of P. E. Fisher, also leveling the Union Pacific telegraph line. W. H. Nealy was in his barn when the wind struck it and was hurt by the flying debris. The house of James Cummings, two miles east, was totally wrecked and several of the family slightly hurt. Everybody in St. Edward went into caves or cellars. Hail broke most of the windows in town.

Meagre reports of the storm come in from the country but it is feared that some lives have been lost.

STRUCK BY AN ELECTRIC.

Wagon Containing a Man and Five Children.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., April 27.—An early morning electric car, bound from Pawtucket to this place over the east loop of the Interstate Consolidated electric road, struck a wagon containing Thomas Harker, his daughters Annie, Susanna and Silence, and sons James and Richard. They were hurled into the street and badly shaken up, but the attending physicians do not think the injured are seriously hurt. The Harker family was on its way to work in the Slater and Conant mills, Pawtucket, and had just turned from Newport avenue into Central avenue in Seekonk, when the car bound east at a rapid speed struck the forward part of the vehicle, smashing it to pieces. A building at the corner of the two highways shut out the view of the approaching car, and when the wagon was discovered it was too late for the motorman to stop. Motorman Ricketson stood at his post and narrowly escaped serious hurts.

NOT A WIN.

Sloan Rides Once Unplaced, and Twice Second.

LONDON, April 27.—At the third day's racing of the Newmarket first spring meeting, today, Mr. J. M. Hanbury's Lowland Beauty won the Thursday Welter handicap prize. Tod Sloan rode C. F. Dwyer's Miss Nellie filly, but was unplaced. Thirteen horses ran. The betting was 6 to 4 against Sloan's mount.

Mr. P. Lorillard's bay colt Dominie II, ridden by Sloan, finished second to Mr. Wallace Johnston's bay colt Harrow, in the race for the Chippenham stakes. Captain Laing's Footpad II was third. Seven horses ran. The betting was 9 to 4 against Dominie II.

In the March stakes Sloan rode Lord William Beresford's Borzak, and finished second. Mr. Cooper's New Haven II was the winner. Five horses ran. Mr. Alexander's Solomnis was third. The betting was 5 to 2 against Borzak.

SAVED FROM THE SULTANA.

Survivors of the Disaster Celebrate the Anniversary.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 27.—Nearly 100 survivors of the Sultana disaster gathered here in annual convention today, the occasion being the thirty-fifth anniversary of the event. The session today was largely devoted to addresses and reports of officers.

Each year shows a marked decrease in the membership from death and the past year has been no exception in this respect.

The Sultana was a Mississippi river boat. April 27, 1804, she was working her way up the river when a terrific explosion occurred, and in the ensuing half hour hundreds of lives were lost. The disaster was considered one of the most appalling of the civil war. The Sultana was loaded with soldiers.

Rich Gold Ore in Blowout Mountain.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 27.—Ore assaying $1,000 gold to the ton has been taken out of the side of Blowout mountain in Cook county, and since Saturday night every claim within a radius of a mile of the discovery has been staked. Farmers have quit their field work and gone prospecting.

Her Crank Pin Broken.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Steamer Atlanca, which arrived from Colon today, reports that April 24 she sighted steamer Simon Dumois, steering west-southwest, under sail, probably heading for Nassau. She signalled that her crank pin was broken. She sailed from Boston for Porto Plata April 14.

German Evangelical Lutheran Synod in Session.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 27.—The triennial convention of the German Evangelical Lutheran synod is in session here, with 600 ministers and college presidents in attendance. Rev. H. Schwan of Cleveland is acting as president, and in his opening address said that the tendency toward spending so much money on fine church buildings, and the consequent drain to keep up running expenses, is ill advised and in the end will not accomplish the good that a smaller and wiser expenditure of money in other directions would give.

REVOLVERS DRAWN.

Non-Union Men Forced by Strikers to Leave the Mines.

WARDNER, Idaho, April 27.—After an all-night session, the striking miners yesterday morning went in a body to the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mines and stopped the non-union men from entering the mines. At first persuasion was used, but finally revolvers were drawn and the non-union men were forced to retire.

Last night no attempt was made to interfere with the working force and about 80 men went on duty when the shifts changed. Sheriff Young arrived from Wallace yesterday, and last night armed men were on guard both at the Bunker Hill mines and the mill.

McKinley Assures Germany of His Friendliness.

BERLIN, April 27.—It is announced here today that President McKinley yesterday received the German ambassador, Dr. Von Holleben, and expressed his disapproval of the remarks attributed to Captain Coghlan of United States cruiser Raleigh, at a recent dinner, and requested the ambassador to assure Emperor William and the German government of his friendly sentiments.

Von Buelow Leaves Samoa.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, April 27.—Von Buelow, the former German lieutenant who organized the forces of Mataafa here, has left Samoa for Tonga island.

A MEMORY OF BOYHOOD.

And the boy is there—a bare-footed, freckled, backwoods lad, whose age might be anything from eight to twelve, fishing pole in hand. There are bramble scratches on his bare brown legs, like the marks of a wildcat's claws, while patches of sunburn show rosy red through the opening of his cotton shirt. A single suspender and a brim torn straw hat complete the tout ensemble, if we may except a yellow, switch-tailed cur, with one ear slit and a sinister cast in an eye, sitting close at the fisher lad's back.

But sunburn, scratches and tatters, even the dog, are all forgotten, as the boy watches breathlessly the wabbling cork that buoys his fishing line. A kingfisher utters its harsh, rasping protest against this invasion of its vested rights; a red squirrel chatters hysterically just out of reach of the owner of the switch-tail, who dares not resent the intrusion.—[Outing for May.

WORK TO BE DONE JUNE 10.

Petition for Extension of Telephone Conduits Granted.

The committee on streets and highways gave a hearing last evening on the petition of the Providence Telephone Company for permission to lay conduits for its wires in Catherine street and other highways. Chairman Shepley and all the members of the committee were present. The chairman read a letter from Robert M. Franklin, in behalf of a number of the abutters on Catherine street, asking that the hearing originally set for last Thursday evening be postponed to a date not earlier than Tuesday of this week. The chairman said the hearing had been arranged for the earliest date in accordance with Mr. Franklin's wishes, but that yesterday afternoon he had received a second letter from Mr. Franklin stating that the persons whom he represented had withdrawn all opposition, on condition that the wires be laid under the sidewalks and that Catherine street be not dug up at this season of the year.

The advisability of laying the conduits under the sidewalks was briefly discussed by Manager Wright of the telephone company, Chairman Shepley, Alderman O'Neill and Street Commissioner Hamilton. Mr. Wright was not altogether in favor of placing the wires under the sidewalks, saying that the conduits could be laid in the highways near the curbstones and that only a small section of the street would be open at a time and the whole work in Catherine street could be finished in 10 days if the weather was good. He thought the work would not interfere greatly with driving on the street, as only a small section would be opened each day and the street restored before the day's work was done.

The committee voted unanimously to grant the petition, the company to be asked to sign an agreement in accordance with the terms of the resolution which was before the City Council at the last meeting and which was approved by the city solicitor. On account of the delay in granting the permission, the time for the completion of the work was extended from June 1 to June 10.

Manager Wright said the work will be commenced next Monday morning, and with good weather the conduits would be laid in Catherine street within 10 days and the entire work done within the time allowed. The petition asks for authority to lay conduits in Catherine street from Bellevue avenue to Channing avenue; in Elizabeth street, 200 feet from Catherine street; in Cottage street, from Catherine street to the corner of Old Beach road and Pew's court; in Fillmore street, 200 feet; in Redwood avenue, 150 feet; and from the corner of Ocean and Coggeshall avenues to the corner of Ledge road and Bellevue avenue. The conduits, wherever possible, will contain wires for the fire alarm service.

GILBERT STUART.

In introducing an account of Gilbert Stuart's portrait of Mrs. Griffith, an engraving of which forms the frontispiece of the May Century, Mr. Charles Henry Hart gives this account of the famous painter:

Gilbert Stuart was five feet ten inches in height, with fine physique, brown hair, a ruddy complexion, and strongly marked features. He dressed with elegance, which was possible at the period of which I write, and, notwithstanding his biting sarcasm, keen wit, and searching eye, was a great favorite with the fair sex. In his thirty-first year he chose for his partner through life Miss Charlotte Coats, a lady of much personal beauty, and with a fine contralto voice, the daughter of a Berkshire physician, and they were married May 10, 1786.

Notwithstanding the new responsibilities this changed condition entailed, Stuart continued his old manner of living, and soon found himself deeply embarrassed. In those "good old times" the supposed remedy for failure to pay one's debts was the debtors' prison, our enlightened forefathers not possessing the appreciation of the situation belonging to the matured child of the forest, who, when confronted with a like condition, laconically said: "Ugh! In prison no catch beaver." Thus many times did Stuart find himself where he "no catch beaver," until, to escape the walls of the old Fleet, he removed, two years after his marriage, to Dublin, and took up his residence at Stillorgan Park, a few miles distant from the city, flattering inducements having been offered him by his Irish friends, who were so taken with his free manner and open-handedness that they adopted him, and spoke of him as "our Irish Stuart."

Stuart had many amusing experiences while in Ireland, although his stories must be taken with much salt, as he was a vain rodomantadist, and enjoyed the relation of imaginary experiences among his best practical jokes. One story that he was particularly fond of telling was of an invitation to visit a gentleman who desired to have some portraits painted. He found an old castle with a new tenant, a tailor who had acquired a large fortune by army contracts. The portraits that he desired Stuart to paint were of his ancestors; and as he knew not who they were, or what they were like, his commission to Stuart was to paint them as they ought to have been. This Stuart did so satisfactorily to his patron that the painter was paid double the agreed price; and these portraits, with their century of age, today doubtless do duty for authentic likenesses of some ancient Celtic worthies. Such a story as this has its moral as an impressive warning to students of historical portraiture, and is an important foot-note to the history of such false impersonations.

PORTSMOUTH.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Ballou of Providence spent Tuesday at their summer home at Bristol Ferry, where improvements are being made preparatory to their coming for the season.

Rev. Reginald Pearce of Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, is visiting his parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. Sturgis Pearce.

Miss Mary B. Coggeshall, while entertaining Tuesday Mrs. Laura Peckham of Westport and her sister, Mrs. Charles Sherman of Portsmouth, was taken seriously ill, remaining unconscious until 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, and dying early this morning. Her guests remained to care for her. Mrs. William A. Peckham of Newport, her cousin, visited her yesterday.

Miss Edith Pearce gave an arbutus party Tuesday, which was greatly enjoyed. The guests met at the carhouse and thence went to Tiverton, where they succeeded in gathering a plentiful supply of the fragrant blossoms. On emerging from the woods, they were surprised by finding a dainty lunch awaiting them.

The net proceeds from the Jeter concert were $21.50. It was given for the benefit of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society.

A number of valuable dogs, both in Portsmouth and Middletown, have lately been either killed or injured, by shooting. Some of the injured ones were left to suffer instead of putting an end to their misery.

POLO SEASON OPENED AT HEMPSTEAD.

The polo season was opened at the Meadowbrook Club at Hempstead, Long Island, yesterday, with a game between the Rockaways and Meadowbrooks, the former winning, 8 goals to 6. The Rockaway team comprised Foxhall Keene, John E. Cowdin, Stanley Mortimer and E. Willard Roby, and the Meadowbrooks Oliver M. Bird, Harry Payne Whitney, James R. Eustis and James Appleton, the last-named a member of the Myopia Club. Mr. Appleton was a guest of Mr. Whitney and was mounted on one of the latter's ponies. In one of the games in a general mix-up in the centre of the field the pony fell, throwing Mr. Appleton in the middle of the bunch of men and horses, the player having a narrow escape from the hoofs of his own and others' ponies. He received a strained shoulder and sustained a number of severe contusions.

ABLE TO STAND ALONE.

Postmaster General Smith Thinks We Need No Alliance.

CHICAGO, April 27.—Charles Emory Smith, Postmaster General, was at the Auditorium Annex last night. Today he is the orator at the Grant birthday memorial exercises at Galena. A special train this morning conveyed Mr. Smith and prominent Chicagoans to Galena.

Chatting in his apartments last evening of national affairs, Mr. Smith said: "This nation does not need an alliance, political, commercial or military, with any foreign power that exists. I believe that the American people feel this, feel that we are able to stand alone and cope with any problem that confronts us. I believe in that.

"In one of almost the last things that Grant wrote before his death he says that during all time England and this country should be natural allies and friends, and then he refers to England's colonial policy and dwells at length upon its superb colonial system. At that time we possessed no colonies, so it looks as if he almost divined what the future would bring forth for us."

The Postmaster General then discussed events and questions which have grown out of the Spanish-American war and the policy of the administration in colonial matters. Regarding Cuba he said: "We will maintain a form of government there until the people of that island can give to the world a stable, permanent, strong government of their own.

"As to the Filipinos the United States is fighting them now to secure peace. That is the only object of the present campaign. As to what will be done with them afterward, the American people will settle that question themselves. They will decide what shall be done with the islands and the executive and legislative branches of the government will follow the behests of the people.

"Are we going to aid England in China? Not that I know of. The United States has trade interests there and these will be protected, but beyond that I do not expect that we will have any extraordinary interest in China's troubles.

"Speaking of colonies, I might say that we have colonies now—Porto Rico and Hawaii, and others which some of us believe have come to us to stay for all time. True we did not seek them; they were forced upon us by events. But they are here, and it might seem that a definite colonial policy must be expected in the future. The American people will have to settle this for themselves and will, unquestionably, when the proper time comes for settlement to be made.

"The United States has taken a certain position before the whole world and is big enough and strong enough to maintain it of its own free will. How long that position shall be maintained the people themselves will decide, and I have not the slightest doubt but that they will decide it in the right way. I have great confidence in the judgment of the people, the future of the nation, the certainty that for all time to come the government as representing the people will hold an advanced position among nations on all questions which affect the happiness, welfare and peace of men. We are respected in every part of the world today and I think the quantity of that respect will greatly increase in the next few years.

"I cannot say when the Filipinos will sue for peace, but as that is all this government is fighting for there at this time, it ought to be pretty soon and will be hailed with delight by everybody. What will come after that, as I state, Washington cannot say—the popular will must decide."

Mr. Smith will not make a long stay in the West. He will return directly to Washington after the Galena celebration.

AS RICH AS THE BUTTE MINE.

Discovery of Large Copper Ledges Not Far from Tacoma.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—A special from Tacoma says it is reported that the largest copper ledges ever discovered in the West have been found in the carbon district north of Mount Rainier and 60 miles east of this city. The ore is said to be similar in character and geological situation to that found in Montana and to be fully as rich as that of the Butte mine. Chester Thorne, president of the National Bank of Commerce of this city, has had prospectors at work in the new district for two years. It is stated that a large force of men will engage in the work of development as soon as the snow disappears.

Apparent Shortage of $10,000.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 27.—Captain Henry Leyhe, general manager of the Eagle Book Store Company, says the examination thus far of the books of the missing secretary, Roland Quentin, shows discrepancies and apparent shortages aggregating $10,000.

CURES WITHOUT PAIN.

The Pyramid Pile Cure cures all forms of piles without one particle of pain. This desirable point is not obtained by the use of injurious opiates which simply deaden and paralyze the nerves of the parts and make matters worse in the long run. But it is done solely by its remarkable healing and soothing effects.

And while it thus gives immediate relief, at the same time the disease is not merely checked, but a radical cure is accomplished.

And the point we want to make clear is that all this is done without a particle of pain.

This fact is one great reason for the popularity of the Pyramid Pile Cure and constitutes one very great difference between it and almost any other treatment for piles.

Every kind of surgical operation for piles is excruciatingly painful besides endangering the life of the patient and in most cases is not to be compared with the Pyramid Pile Cure, either in making successful cures without pain or in cheapness and safety.

The Pyramid Pile Cure has been before the public so long, and its merits recognized by too many people to allow it to be classed with the many salves, suppositories, pills, etc., and you run no risk in trying it, as is often the case with untried preparations.

If you are ever troubled with any form of piles or rectal disease do not forget the Pyramid Pile Cure. Prepared by the Pyramid Drug Co., of Marshall, Mich., and sold by druggists at 50 cents per package.

Stagg will accompany the team. In the runners which represent the University of Chicago this year, the Midway school has five of the fastest sprinters in the West. FEUDAL LORD OF MINDELHEIM.

New Honors to be Worn by the Duke of Marlborough.

On April 27, king's birthday, the Prince Regent of Bavaria will reinstate the Duke of Marlborough as feudal Lord and "reigning" Prince of the principality of Mindelheim, raising, at the same time, the duchess, nee Consuelo Vanderbilt, to the rank and dignity of a genuine princess. And this act which makes the present and future issue of the Marlborough princes and princesses, respectively, on both their father's and mother's side, will entitle them to intermarry with royalty. In fact Princess Consuelo and her boys, as well as other boys and girls that may bless her union with the duke, will have in future the same rank on the continent of Europe that is enjoyed by the once sovereign houses in Hohenlohe, Hesse, Isenburg, Salm, Sayn-Wittgenstein and others, which, from the view-point of the Almanach de Gotha, "are just as good" as the Hohenzollerns, Hapburgs, Romanoffs, Bourbons and Orleans.

The reasons prompting the regent to re-invest the descendant of old Jack Churchill, first Prince of Mindelheim, with the fief are said to have a metallic ring to them, but that in no way affects the act itself. Luitpold, as the legal representative of insane King Otto, has a perfect right to dispose of the feudal prerogatives and dignities appertaining to any fief of the crown of Bavaria, and the act contemplated does not provide for more, as the suzerainty of the province remains vested in the house of Wittelsbach despite the fact that Marlborough and his duchess will be its prince and princess.

In other words, the crown of Bavaria cedes to the duke its lands, forests and castles in the district, and therewith the privileges appertaining to certain landed estates in monarchical countries. A seat in the House of Lords, the right to keep a bodyguard, freedom from military service and taxation, likewise the right to administer justice, to appoint mayors, parsons, school teachers, judges and police officers within the limits of the fief. Bavaria attends to the post, the telegraph, the levying of recruits and taxes. All other branches of administration are vested in the "reigning" prince.

But, say the Munich reports, Marlborough laid seemingly little stress on these rights, which appear to a German as the height of ambition. His negotiations for re-instatement were solely dictated by a desire to give his American wife a standing among the royalties of the continent of Europe, and, receiving assurances that Consuelo and her children should share his title, he did not hesitate to pay over to the crown of Bavaria the very large sum demanded. The real estate secured in the bargain is worth only about $25,000 to $30,000, but when a man like Marlborough must choose between dollars and a beloved wife's ambition, he cannot afford to haggle.

It is a well known fact that princes of the European continent, particularly those of the ancient Roman-German empire, such as the Marlboroughs, are forbidden by decree of the Vienna congress to intermarry with commoners. If they do marry women below the rank of countess (descended from a once sovereign family) the union is regarded as morganatic, and the wife has no claim to her husband's title. Neither can the issue of a morganatic marriage succeed to the father's title or to the family estates, if the latter are entailed—that is, limited in descent to a particular heir, "legitimate" on his father's side and mother's side.

This rule never was acknowledged by Great Britain, and Queen Victoria, though German in many other respects, openly disavows it, and treats the ladies suffering from its unjust discrimination with studied courtesy. Thus she conferred the title of "Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar" upon the late Lady Augusta Lenox, daughter of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, when that lady married Prince Edward, Her Majesty's field marshal and commander of the Life Guards.

At the court of Weimar and in the Continental peerages however the lady figures as Augusta Countess von Dornburg, and her royal brothers and cousins by marriage never acknowledge her as the wife of Prince Edward. If she had presented her husband with sons and daughters, they could not have borne their father's name; they would have been known as Counts and Countesses Van Dornburg, though the queen might have styled them princes and princesses in her own dominions, of course.

Marlborough and Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar holding equal rank on the Continent, Consuelo Vanderbilt found herself in the same position as Lady Augusta Lenox when she married. She was a duchess in England right enough, but on the Continent she remained a social nobody. True, she had plenty of distinguished company—the Duke of Fife, the Marquis of Lorne, the Tecks, sons-in-law, nephews and cousins of the queen. When these gentlemen visit a Continental court they eat at the "second table" with the higher grade goldsticks and titled flunkies, but the American girl had no taste for following this august example. Instead, she prevailed upon her husband to rectify the accident of her birth.

Commerce in titles being a recognized business among sovereigns (the only one in which they can safely engage), it is not strange that Consuelo received offers of principalities and dukedoms in Italy, Spain, Portugal, Austria and the Balkan states. But her own and Marlborough's ambition were above mere mushroom dignities. The duke desired for his wife a place well to the fore in the Almanach de Gotha, and if their union was blessed with issue his and Consuelo's children should enjoy all the rights, privileges and prerogatives to which their illustrious ancestry entitled them.

Marlborough is said to have opened negotiations for his re-instatement as "reigning" Prince of Mindelheim soon after marrying Miss Vanderbilt, for, recent London reports to the contrary notwithstanding, his claim to the title was never disputed by authority. The Roman-German Emperor Joseph I. made old Jack Churchill a prince of the empire, with the appellation of "Hochgeboren" (high born) for himself and descendants by patent, dated August 24, 1705. A year or so later he gave him the principality of Mindelheim, and when the duke, ten years afterward, returned that fief to Bavaria for a money consideration he was breveted "Prince of Nellenburg." So the Marlboroughs might call themselves Princes of Mindelheim-Nellenburg if they chose to follow the German fashion. The Gotha Almanac of 1876 vouches for the correctness of this information.

Mindelheim has a history of its own. Up to the dissolution of the Roman-German Empire it was a fief of that realm, which the ancient kaiser bestowed first upon the Dukes of Teck and afterward upon the Bavarian electoral princes, who held it for so long a time that they looked upon it as an entailed estate. When, however, in the first decade of the eighteenth century Emporer Joseph fell to quarrelling with the Elector Max Emanuel, His Majesty remembered that there was a string attached to his grant. So he yanked back the principality, to confer it, as already mentioned, upon his ally's victorious general.

Since 1715 Bavaria has been in undisputed possession of Mindelheim, but her re-assumption of sovereignty affected the Marlborough titular dignity no more than, for instance, the pretensions of Austria and the Kings of Spain and Portugal to the kingdom of Jerusalem affect the Turkish rule in Palestine. That Bavaria is willing to sell the feudal rights appertaining to the old fief is due to the exigencies of her civil list. She was saddled with a heavy burden of debt by the late crazy King Ludwig. As long as the debt remains unpaid part of the crown income is sequestrated for the benifit of Ludwig's creditors; so it is no wonder the regent grasped the chance contained in Marlborough's offer to wipe out that annoying indebtedness.

Still several important points had to be settled before either of the contracting parties could obtain what he had bargained for. For instance, the kaiser, who regards himself as the successor of the ancient Roman-German Emperors, had to be sounded as to his willingness to receive the beautiful American into the European royal family. His Majesty, it is said, consented only after a good deal of dickering, and so did the Emperor of Austria. After that there was comparatively easy sailing, for the rest of the monarchs are apt to follow in matters of etiquette the example set by the courts of Berlin and Vienna.

Munich reports say that the decree re-instating the Duke of Marlborough and creating the duchess a princess will be published shortly, probably on the next birthday of King Otto, April 27, a day which is usually made the occasion for bestowing royal grants.

Meanwhile the principality is preparing for a reception of its new lord and mistress, though no date for Marlborough's assumption of the reins of government has as yet been fixed. The wideawake townsmen and peasants calculate that the residence of a rich English duke in their midst will put money into their pockets, and their suddenly discovered loyalty can be measured by their greediness. A correspondent who recently returned from the district says the people are erecting triumphal arches and flagpoles, while the parsons and mayors are busily framing speeches of welcome.

The principality exceeds in size the fief subject to the German chancellor, Prince Hohenlohe. It has eight square miles and contains a town, Mindelheim, and seven villages, with 9,000 inhabitants. Mindelheim is a few hours distant from the city of Augsburg. It is a pretty place, situated in a picturesque neighborhood. If the Marlboroughs intend to reside there part of the year they will find a splendid old castle for their accommodation. The schloss, it is true, is not in the best of repair, and is lacking in all modern conveniences, but money will wipe out these defects. Furthermore, there are at the disposal of the prince and princess two hunting lodges and a country house, which latter may be almost styled a palace. The land is fertile and the forests abound in game. Mindelheim seems, indeed, an ideal place for the establishment of a petty court. On her admission to Europe's royal circle the former New York girl will become the superior in rank of all other American women who have married titles, not excepting even the vice queen of India. Thereafter kings and emperors will address her as "Bonne Soeur," while all not of the blood royal should accord her the title "Most High, Puissant and Noble Princess." Consuelo's visiting card will be inscribed: "The Duchess of Marlborough, Princess of the Roman Empire."

Up to now the duchess had to be content with a crown consisting of a circle of gold, chased and jeweled, set round with eight strawberry leaves and as many pearls on pyramidical points of equal height alternating, and having a cap of crimson velvet turned up with ermine. Her new rank will entitle her to a right royal diadem, closed on top, and surmounted by a cross, while the arches are wreathed with pearls and precious stones.

Give the Children a Drink

called Grain-O. It is a delicious, appetizing, nourishing food drink to take the place of coffee. Sold by all grocers and liked by all who have used it because when properly prepared it tastes like the finest coffee but is free from all its injurious properties. Grain-O aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. It is not a stimulant but a health builder, and children, as well as adults, can drink it with great benefit. Costs about ¼ as much as coffee. 15 and 25c.

COLUMBINES.

Certain flowers always serve to recall scenes of entrancing beauty. Thus, the Dutchman's breeches, with its snow-white racemes is, to the writer, associated with sunny nooks in the cliffs of the Hudson Highlands; the white sandwort with the summit of Mount Lafayette, and the Sabbatia with the shore of Worden's pond.

But no wild flower has a more talismanic influence than our columbine. One cannot conceive of it apart from lovely scenery. It naturally seeks rocky hillsides, and gray cliffs, its trembling bells hanging from giddy heights, and its tender foliage rivalling that of ferns in delicacy. What a very singular flower in its construction, when one pauses to consider it! The five ovate, colored sepals: the five long, hollow, red petals, each ending in a honey-bearing knob known to all small boys; the numerous ex-serted yellow stamens, and the five pistils with slender styles, compose a flower which, though regular, is odd. The lower portion of both calyx and corolla is bright yellow—adding very much to the color effect. The stamens also are of the same hue. The leaves are exquisitely compounded, with a tendency to break up into groups of three: what a botanist calls a "ternate" arrangement. The individual leaflets are rounded, wedge-shaped and lobed. They have a long stalk, sheathing at the base. The name columbine is derived from the Latin, columba, a dove. The five spurred petals are supposed to imitate doves, the sepals forming the wings. Walter Crane, in his Feast of the Flowers, has embodied the idea in a subtly poetical picture. The scientific name Aquilegia means "water-drawing"—a term of no obvious significance.

While speaking of names it should be said that our Eastern plant is often spoken of—as is also the azalea—as wild honey-suckle. It has no relation to true honey-suckles of the genus Lonicera, of which, however, we have several showy native species. Anything that contains honey is liable to be called honey-suckle. We might as consistently call anything with wool a sheep, or with claws a crab!

Our red columbine is well known all over the East, and is replaced in the Rocky mountains by a very similar carmine-red species—A. formosa. Two far Western species are especially lovely. One of these, Aquilegia Caerulea, is the well chosen state flower of Colorado. The flowers are more or less erect, often an inch and a half in length, with very slender blue spurs, the blade of the petals white; the sepals of the most exquisite sky blue. A species, otherwise similar, the A. chrysantha, is often seen in cultivation, and has golden-yellow flowers.

Aquilegia vulgaris, the well known old-fashioned, but ever-welcome, garden columbine, varies in color from an almost black-purple, through violet and blue, to white. Often it is seen full double; spur within spur, like nests of pill-boxes, sometimes the whole flower is changed to a rosette of plain petals, with no spurs at all. No doubt interesting hybrids can be produced between the different species.

The columbine still grows within the city limits, but with the extension of streets and the filling in of lands, must, with much less of native growth, soon be recorded as obsolete.—[William Whitman Bailey, in Providence Journal.

FINANCIAL.

NEW YORK, April 27, Wall Street—The stock market opened strong, with Louisville at 68⅛, Brooklyn Transit 136, Northern Pacific 52⅝, Northern Pacific preferred 79¼, People's Gas 128, Sugar 170¼, St. Paul 128¾, Southern preferred, 51⅜, Union Pacific 47, Union Pacific preferred 79⅝, Federal Steel 68, and Federal Steel preferred 86.

10—Trading was in fairly large volume at the opening of the stock market today and prices were generally better. Conspicuous gains were made by Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Anaconda and some of the minor specialties.

11—Today's early trading was no exception to the recent movements in the stock market, inasmuch as while there was an opening rise prices eased off quickly on professional realizing. The declines were severe in Brooklyn Transit and Anaconda Mining, the latter being affected by the denial of an influential interest in the property of the rumored copper deal. Railroad stocks were not much influenced by the varied movements in the specialties. New York Air Brake showed buoyancy, rising 14 points, but Manhattan Beach fell seven.

Noon—Money on call, steady at 3½ per cent; prime mercantile paper, 3½ @ 4½ per cent; sterling exchange strong, at $4.87¼ @ ½ for demand and $4.85¼ @ ½ for sixty days; posted rates, $4.85½ @ 6 and $4.87½ @ 8; commercial bills, $4.84¼ @ ⅝; silver certificates, 20,000 ounces, at 63¼ @ 64; bar silver, 63¾; Mexican dollars, 48½ @ 50; government bonds, weak. Covering by the short interests in the stocks which had suffered most heavily on the drive brought about a steadier tone, but the rebound was on light trading and gains were not as a rule significant. Inquiries for the middle grade bonds were less urgent but the market was generally higher. Sales of stocks to noon, 287,433 shares.

IN THE HARBOR.

Captain Crapo, in His Little Volunteer, Bound for Cuba.

Captain Thomas Crapo of New Bedford arrived here at 2 o'clock this afternoon in his nine-foot boat Volunteer, in which he expects to sail to Cuba. He started on his voyage from the Point street bridge, Providence, shortly before noon yesterday, reaching Bristol early in the evening, and left there early this morning for Newport.

Two weeks ago Captain Crapo arrived in East Providence. He had left New Bedford April 4 and had walked all the way, dragging his boat after him on light trucks, made especially for the purpose. Since arriving in East Providence he has been visiting a relative there. He originally intended after leaving Providence to make his way overland to New London or New Haven and make his start by water at one of these places, but the weather seemed so favorable and the difficulties met in traveling on foot with the boat were so great that he decided to embark on his voyage at Providence.

From Newport he will proceed along the Sound, stopping frequently at various places along the coast on the way to New York. After leaving New York he will make his way to Key West by inland waterways so far as is possible, and when it is necessary to go outside will keep just far enough off shore to avoid the breakers, and will land and haul his boat up every night. He expects to go from New York through the canal at New Brunswick, N. J., to the Delaware river, down the river and by canal to Chesapeake bay. From there he will go through Dismal Swamp and by canal to Albemarle sound. Beyond this point the trip will be made in the open ocean.

Captain Crapo figures that he will arrive in Key West some time in October. From there he will sail without delay to Cuba. It is not his intention to remain on the island for any length of time. He plans to return at once to the United States and make a tour of the country.

The boat in which the captain is to make his perilous trip is a flat-bottom skiff made of one-half-inch cedar. She is nine feet long, three feet wide at the stern, 14 inches deep, and weighs about 100 pounds. With the exception of an opening two feet in diameter in the centre she is completely decked over with carefully prepared canvas. The manhole is provided with an oiled canvas bag-like apron, which is a continuation of the canvas of the deck. The apron is provided with a puckering string so that when the mariner gets into the boat he can bind the apron tightly about his waist and make his little craft water tight. When he wishes to lie down he will pull out the one thwart with which the boat is provided and slide down under the deck with his feet toward the bow.

The Volunteer, as the captain has named the stanneh little craft, carries a single lateen sail, similar to those used on the ordinary canoe, with a spread of four square feet of lightweight canvas. A stiff bamboo rod serves as a lateen yard. On the sail in large black letters is printed "Capt. Thomas Crapo and Canoe, Bound for Cuba, from New Bedford, Mass. At the head of her mast, which is five feet two inches in height, the Volunteer flies the flag of the American Volunteers, which bears the motto, "The Lord My Banner," and to the end of the yard a small United States flag is attached. The boat is painted blue with her name in large white letters on her bows.

On his way from Providence to Bristol, near Pappoosesquash point, yesterday, when Captain Crapo attempted to set sail, the boat lurched suddenly and the captain was thrown overboard. He is a good swimmer and crawled over the bow, after having struggled in the water for a time, by seizing the mast and pulling himself over it. He kept the boat righted all the time and shipped no water.

CRUSHED BY HIS CART.

Charles Otis Albro, a City Driver, Almost Instantly Killed.

Charles Otis Albro, driver of city watering cart No. 2, was almost instantly killed this morning by the breaking of an axle of his cart. He was at work about Marlboro street and had just filled his cart near Liberty square, about 10:15 o'clock, and was driving along Farewell street with his cart full. When opposite Coddington street the off rear axle broke short off at the hub, and the cart being topheavy fell over, throwing off the driver. The footboard of the cart fell across his chest, crushing it, and the body of the cart lay across his body. When assistance reached him he was still alive, but unconscious. A doctor was summoned, but could render no assistance, as the unfortunate man was beyond human aid and expired before the ambulance arrived to take him to his home on Willow street.

The axle was of steel and had evidently crystallized under the constant jarring it had undergone in service. There was no sign of a break on the outside, but when the time came for it to give way it did so without warning. The cart is a heavy concern, with a round body set upon the gear in such a way as to carry the load high, and when the wheel fell off, the cart, loaded as it was, at once fell over, giving the driver no chance to save himself.

Mr. Albro was about 50 years of age and had long been employed in the street department. He leaves a widow and an adult son and daughter.

A large crowd gathered at the scene of the accident, and many remained until the men of the street department took away the broken cart, under the superintendence of Street Commissioner Hamilton and Aldermen R. P. Hamilton and William Shepley.

LIQUID FUEL.

The chief difficulties attending the use of petroleum under boilers have been overcome by feeding the oil in the form of spray and heating to about 500 degrees F. the current of air in which the oil is burned. In a paper to the London Society of Arts, Sir Marcus Samuel states that the calorific power of the oil under ordinary marine boilers has been shown to be almost two to one as compared with Eastern coals, while on locomotives one ton of oil has been found to equal 2½ tons of coal. The oil offers further economies in handling, stowing, etc. The consumption of petroleum in Russia as fuel alone has reached not less than 7,000,000 tons per annum, being used exclusively for many years on vessels navigating the Caspian sea, and to a considerable extent on steamers engaged in the Eastern trade and in several of the European navies, and great numbers of vessels are being fitted for its use. This engineer foresees a general adoption of liquid fuel for marine boilers, etc.

Sampson's Squadron of Evolution Preparing to Assemble.

A Washington despatch says the Navy Department has arranged for the assembling of Admiral Sampson's squadron of evolution in Narragansett bay May 30. The five armored ships now composing the squadron—the New York, Brooklyn, Indiana, Massachusetts and Texas—arrived at San Juan, Porto Rico, yesterday. They will leave San Juan Friday and are scheduled to reach New York May 2. From that time until it is necessary for them to start for Newport they will all be overhauled to put them in good condition for summer manoeuvres. The exercises of the squadron in connection with the work of the War College will begin immediately after the squadron arrives. It is intended to have the War College prepare problems in naval strategy, which the vessels under Admiral Sampson's command will proceed to work out in a practical manner.

UNWILLING TO GO TO A DIVISION HOSPITAL.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. John J. Conlin, who was a member of Company F, First Rhode Island volunteers, and is now employed by Caswell, Massey & Co., sustained a fractured ankle in a runaway. He was on his wagon near Mrs. John Carter Brown's house on Hazard avenue, when the horse ran away along Coggeshall avenue and Morton avenue, where the wagon upset, throwing out the driver and breaking his ankle. The accident looked like a very bad one, but the wagon escaped injury and the driver escaped better than the spectators expected. The ambulance was called and the injured man was taken to the Newport Hospital, where his injury was attended to.

Before going to the hospital the injured man showed that he still remembered his experience in the army, for when it was suggested that he be sent to the hospital he exclaimed that he would never go to the division hospital; he would go home first. He was assured that the Newport Hospital had a different reputation from that given the division hospital of the army, and as soon as he remembered where he was he acknowledged that this was so.

BASE BALL.

The Newport Base Ball Association, at its meeting this evening, will open bids and award contracts for repairing the fences about the grounds, putting the park in condition, and for score cards and refreshment privileges. Officers for the year will also be elected.

The grounds are dry and in apparently better condition than usual, but need some care before they will be in condition for play. As usual, Mr. W. D. Bartley will supply the association with a set of canvass bases. Those that he has presented in the past have been so satisfactory that the first kick against them has yet to be heard.

The weather of yesterday was so sultry that many naturally turned their thoughts to base ball, and wished they had a chance to hold down one of the bleacher seats in the afternoon.

A nine from the Torpedo Station will play the Training Station boys at Coasters' Harbor island Saturday afternoon.

THE FUTURE OF THE NEGRO.

Mr. Booker T. Washington deserves the gratitude of his own race, for he has done much for it in a way that no one else has been at once able and willing to do. But he deserves the cordial approval and sympathy of the whites as well, and of the whites of the South in particular, for his influence is in the direction of a settlement of the race difficulties in the only manner that we can hope will be practical and permanent. The principle on which Mr. Washington seeks to work and to get his people to work is that the trouble for the blacks will tend to disappear in the proportion that they are honest, industrious, and intelligent. The goal he sets before them is to be able to do any task that they undertake as well as white men can do it, and as well as it can be done. In the ratio that they approach this goal he believes that they will win the fair treatment to which they are entitled.

Neither Mr. Washington nor those that are working with him in the same field have any illusions as to the difficulty or the complexity of the problem on which they are engaged. They know only too well that whatever success they may attain will come very slowly, but it is precisely for this reason that they are pursuing a plan and a principle that looks to future results as well as to the present. The main object of their labors is industrial education. This, of course, includes and starts with the fundamental portions of ordinary schooling, and this is carried as far as circumstances will permit. But the essential aim is to produce not scholars, but self-supporting men and women, as thoroughly equipped and trained as possible for the various callings in which a living is to be gained.

Among those callings those connected with the farm and the household are regarded as most important, because the greater number of the colored people are in agricultural states, and life on the farm offers generally better opportunity for independent life and comparative freedom from the worst forms of prejudice with which they have to contend. In the schools established mainly through the efforts of Mr. Washington the training for agricultural work, however, is directed to making not merely farm hands, but farmers, versed in the essential knowledge of crops and the conditions of raising them, in the care of stock, and in the mechanical work of the farm. In the same spirit it is sought to make the girls fitted for the life of the farm as well as competent housewives.

As Mr. Washington constantly urges on the people of the North and of the South in his addresses, this work is for the children and the children's children, and thus for the race as an element in the industrial, social, and political life of the nation. At best the life of the negro in our land has many cruel possibilities. His race has been more heartlessly oppressed than any other in modern times. In the consequences of that oppression the whole nation has been forced to share, and they are not yet exhausted. Serious confusion and disturbance, with some danger, still attend the settlement of what we call the race problem. The work of Tuskegee and of Hampton is an intelligent and valuable contribution to that settlement, and no one can doubt that in the proportion of their success the difficulties will lessen. They surely deserve the cordial support of all who can understand their influence and the need of it.—[New York Times.
